

What Does It Mean To Be A People of Attention?

Alice Walker famously wrote, “I think it pisses God off if you walk by the color purple in a field somewhere and don't notice it.”

Walker's words are a great reminder that attention and gratitude go hand in hand. Indeed they are a perfect embodiment of the dominant message about attention: that it's here to wake us up to life's many gifts.

But it's also important to remember that attention has a few ulterior motives up its sleeve. So some fair warning is required this month. Because attention won't just make you grateful, it will make you fall in love. And it won't just allow you to notice life's gifts, it also makes it impossible to ignore life's pain.

First, the love part.

Mary Oliver writes, “Attention is the beginning of devotion.” It's a beautiful way of saying you cannot love something that you do not really see. Love simply isn't possible without deep noticing. And noticing deeply seems to inevitably lead to love. Glances and self-interested attention never get to the real person. They stay on the surface and treat the other as a mirror. What you fall in love with is how they make you feel and how they enhance your statue with others. Which means that all you've really done is fall in love with yourself. Loving them, truly them, requires noticing your needs and then putting them down. It asks you to look without expectation of who you want or hope they will be, and instead try to focus simply on who they are right now. It's a type of looking that keeps on looking until you discover something entirely new, entirely other, entirely and uniquely them. And once you notice something that uniquely new, you're in trouble, because you will most definitely be devoted. You will no longer think about what you're getting. You will only want to give.

And now the pain part, which is not all that different from the love piece.

This time it's a UU minister, Rev. Sean Dennison, that captures it best. Sean writes “The ability to see beauty is the beginning of our moral sensibility. What we believe is beautiful we will not wantonly destroy.” In other words, once we notice the beauty at the heart of others and the world, it pains us to see it destroyed. So seeing the beauty of something comes with a commitment. You don't just think to yourself “Oh, that's pretty,” you think “My God, I must protect it.” Its survival becomes your survival. Its pain becomes your pain.

All this is to say that we should expect to feel grateful this month. But, also, don't be surprised if you end up feeling devoted as well. Again, attention doesn't simply help you notice all you've been given; it also makes you fall in love and demands that you give of yourself. So consider yourselves warned, friends: True attention always comes at a cost, because real looking always results in you not being able to look away. Often for the better.

This month may that be true for you!

Our Spiritual Exercises

Option A: Notice with Mary Oliver

In her poem Gratitude, Mary Oliver asks herself and then answers eight questions of attention:

What did you notice?

What did you hear?

When did you admire?

What astonished you?

What would you like to see again?

What was most tender?

What was most wonderful?

What did you think was happening?

It's a poem that treats the details of our days as a blessing and calls us to do the same. So for this month's exercise, let's accept her invitation:

First, take a few days and just spend some time with the poem: The Value of Sparrows

Here's an arresting video of it being read aloud: <https://tinyurl.com/y4lt23ec>

Then use Oliver's questions to write a version of your own by giving your own answers to her eight questions.

Here's an elegant example of someone making it their own: <https://tinyurl.com/y6bgkwn9>

But here's the catch: You've got to decide how to gather the details for your poem. When reading Oliver's poem, you get the feeling she wrote it at the end of a long day outdoors. But it could just as easily have been written at the end of a week, a year, or even a life. So you pick what calls to you. Maybe you take a 2-hour hike and then sit down and write it. Or maybe sit down and write it at the end of an ordinary day of work and family? You might even want to answer the questions as if they are asking about the past year of your life? Or the past few decades.

Think about sharing the poem with a close friend or your life partner before you come to your group.

The point is to let Oliver's eight questions help you remember that our attention is a way, maybe the best way, we say thanks for these precious days we've been given.

Option B: Join the Slow Art Movement

You've probably heard of the slow food movement. But how about the "slow art movement"? It arose from museums realizing that people were "seeing" their art but not really "looking" at it. For instance the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York discovered that people spent an average of only 17 seconds looking at their masterpiece artworks. 17 seconds! So now museums around the country organize special days where guests are asked to sit and view the art for 10, 20 even 30 minutes at a time, and then discuss what happened for them in that time of intensive and intentional looking.

This month you are invited to do the same. What a great excuse to invite a friend to your local museum! And if you don't have a museum near you here's a video with a bunch of options: <https://tinyurl.com/y58beyht> Or maybe you want to do it with a piece of art in your house that you say you love but now rarely give your attention to.

Here are a handful of articles and videos to get you centered and inspired for this exercise. Come to your group ready to share how more than 17 seconds change what you saw.

Option C: Watch it Grow... and Find the Sublime

“One does not need to fast for days and meditate for hours at a time to experience the sense of sublime mystery which constantly envelops us. All one needs to do is notice intelligently, if even for a brief moment, a blossoming tree, a forest flooded with autumn colors, an infant smiling.”

- Simon Greenberg,

This exercise is about moving Greenberg’s words from a written experience to a real one. As he says, it’s a powerful thing to witness the natural world in transition, glimpsing and grasping it as a growing, developing thing. So this month you are invited to observe and soak in that process by planting a fast-growing indoor plant in your house!

Grow a plant?! How’s that spiritual? Well, of course it depends on the attention you give to it. The exercise is really about noticing a growing plant. And if you do that, as Greenberg and the great mystics agree, you will find the sublime.

Here are a bunch of plants that will grow substantially in a month’s time.

- <https://tinyurl.com/y3bodjon>
- <https://tinyurl.com/y5fgrzgk>

Use these links (or a green thumb friend) to identify the plant you want to grow and observe. Place it in an area of your house that will make it not simply visible but easy for you to sit down with it, like near the chair you sit in for your morning cup of coffee. Spend each day of the month finding your own way to pay attention to its emergence. For instance, it might be just observing it while you have that first coffee of the day. Or maybe you will take one picture a day to document the progression. Some of us might pick up a pencil or paints and make a new portrait of it every week. Whatever you choose, the goal is to let the miracle and mystery of emergence sink in, really sink in.

Here’s a link to a few videos that will give you some inspiration: <https://tinyurl.com/y5w6fcbw>

Option D: Make Attention Count

Most of the time, it’s a bird or a cricket that causes it. Their sharp chirp jolts us into the awareness that we are surrounded by sound - sounds that fade into the background most of the time but can easily come to the forefront with a bit of attention.

So for this exercise, take a morning or evening, go sit on the porch or stand in the middle of your favorite field or woods, and then try to notice the many sounds that surround you. And here’s the catch:

Actually, count them!

That's right. Take a pen and paper while you're standing or sitting there and list all the sounds you can detect.

There's power in doing this alone, but it's also wonderful to do with your partner or child.

After your list is as full as you can make it, take another 10 minutes and think about the message of it all. What are those sounds trying to tell you? "You're not alone."? "There's more to life."? "This world is wilder than let yourself imagine."? "Listen up."?

Option E: Notice Them

Let's be honest, we sometimes ignore their need to be noticed. We're talking, of course, about our loved ones. It's never their big needs that we ignore. But on a daily basis, it's all too easy to get...well...busy. Preoccupied. Wrapped up in work. Or worry.

We also know how big of a difference a little attention makes. You see it in your partner's eyes when you take an extra 3 minutes and bring them coffee in bed before you rush out the door with your own mug. Your kid comes home all excited to tell you a story and you have the good sense to put the phone down and look right in their eyes as they spin their yarn. They light up right in front of you.

Yes, we're tired. Yes, life is stressful. Yes, half-hearted attention is not sin. But this month take a week and fight it. Spend a week intentionally finding all the ways you can to give your full attention and full heart to someone near you.

Oh, and be sure to pay attention to the difference it makes for and to them, and the difference it makes to what goes on between you and them...

Option F: Spiritual Practice from Hinduism

"Leaning into Hinduism"

In Hinduism, sound is believed to be the seed and origin of creation. Om, sometimes spelled Aum, is the primordial sound. Our "leaning in" spiritual practice this month will be to engage with mantras. We have listed 3 mantras. The words are in the ancient sacred language of Sanskrit. We have provided a translation (courtesy of Exploring World Religions workbook 2013 ed.). The links provided will allow you to listen to the mantras and experience them. Choose one to engage with or check them all out. Pay attention to what you feel physically, emotionally, mentally as you hear them. Does listening more than once change your experience? If you chant as well as listen, does that change your experience?

1. GAYATRI MANTRA

SANSKRIT:

Om,
Bhur bhuwa swaha
Tat savitur varenyam bhargo devasya dhimahi
Diyo yo nah pracodayat
Om

ENGLISH TRANSLATION:

I meditate on the brilliant light of the One

2. The Asato Ma

(From the Brihadaranyaka Upanishad. Upanishads are sacred scripture in the Hindu tradition)

SANSKRIT

Om, Asato Maa Sad Gamaya
Tamaso Maa Jyotir Gamaya
Mrityor Maa Amrtam Gamaya
Shanti, Shanti, Shanti

ENGLISH TRANSLATION:

O Lord, Lead us from the unreal to the real.
Lead us from darkness to light.

Lead us from death to life.

Peace, Peace, Perfect Peace.

Two options are listed. Which one resonates with you?

a. Asato Ma Sadgamaya With Lyrics - Early Morning Chant - Peace Mantra - Rajshri

<https://youtu.be/Vwyo62x9yC4>

b. Asato Ma music by Ravi Shankar (produced by George Harrison) chant starts about 2:30 into the recording.

3. Om Namath Shivaya

SANSKRIT

Om namah Shivaya

Shivaya namah, Shivaya namah om

Shambhu Shankara namah Shivaya

Girija Shankara namah Shivaya

Arunachala Shiva namah Shivaya

EXPLANATION:

Om - the primal creative force containing all other sounds

Namah - to bow or to honour the name of

Shivaya - Lord Shiva is the divine power that dissolves or brings to a close the creative cycle

Shambhu - causing great happiness; description of Shiva's beneficent aspect in the reintegration of new life

Shankara - used to refer to Shiva in his role as creator

Girija - "mountain born" Refers to Shiva's wife

Parvati, who is the daughter of Himavat, the personification of the Himalayas. Together Shiva and Parvati represent the union of divine potential and divine energy.

Arunachala - a large hill in South India and a pilgrimage site sacred to Shiva.

a. Om Namah Shivaya - Krishna Das Live! Songs With Lyrics

This is long - 15 minutes but is a great illustration of how the chanting and repetition of mantras can lead to ecstatic states. Example of how call and response is sometimes used in mantra chanting. Krishna Das has many different mantras on YouTube.

<https://youtu.be/PTc8X37oJBE>

b. Chant Om Namah Shivay for 108 times(source:The Divine Mantras)*

Again, long but it takes time to chant On Namah Shivay 108 times!

<https://youtu.be/cwq6kIEPoBA>

* 108 is an number of the wholeness of existence - believed to connect the sun, moon and earth. There are said to 108 pithas or sacred sites throughout India, 108 Upanishads (sacred text), 108 marma points (energy points in the body used in Ayurveda medicine); mala (prayer beads) traditionally have 108 beads.

4. Om (Aum) Chanting

There are lots of Om chanting meditations on YouTube. Here are a couple of examples, pick another one, or simply chant Om without a guide.

Option G: Find the Attention Calling to You

Our recommended resources are full of wisdom about what it means to be a people of and a person of attention. Engaging these resources and finding the one that especially speaks to you is a spiritual practice in and of itself.

So, if none of the above exercises call to you, engage the recommended resources section of this packet as your spiritual exercise for the month.

Set aside some regular time throughout a week to go through them and meditate on them until you find the one that most expands or deepens your understanding of attention. After you've found it, consider printing it out and carrying it with you or pinning it up so you can continue to reflect on it throughout the weeks leading up to your group meeting. Come to your group ready to share where the journey led you.

Your Question

As always, don't treat these questions like "homework" or try to answer every single one. Instead, make time to meditate on the list and then pick the one question that speaks to you most. The goal is to figure out which question is "yours." Which question captures the call of your inner voice? Which one contains "your work"? And what is that question trying to get you to notice or acknowledge? Often it helps to read the list to a friend or loved one and ask them which one they think is the question you need to wrestle with!

1. Who was the first person in your life to offer you their attention, without adding their advice?
2. Who in your life needs you to offer them the gift of attention without advice?
3. Would you be pleased if your gravestone read: "She attended well to a few worthy things"?
4. When you were young, did your family teach you to look away from uncomfortable truths or to call attention to them?
5. Is it time to look upon yourself with a bit more tenderness?
6. Where in your life would it help to say, 'Look what's happening!' rather than 'Look what's happening to me!'?
7. Have you ever given your attention so deeply to something that you suddenly felt one with it?
8. Has looking ever made the world suddenly seem magical to you? Do you miss that magic?
9. Have you become too good at staying focused on the wrongs done to you?
10. Gurus and psychologists alike tell us that we become what we give our attention to. What has more of your attention - and more of yourself - than you want?
11. When was the last time you let your attention linger on beauty? Did you keep your gaze there long enough to feel changed? Or to hear it speak to you?
12. Something has been pulling at your attention lately. Do you know why?
13. Is it time to pay a bit less attention to what you hope your life will be?
14. When growing up, what one thing above all others did your family tell you was worthy of attention? Beauty? Duty? Kindness? Honesty? Education? Loyalty? Success? God?
15. What in your life is hungry to be noticed?
16. What's your question? Your question may not be listed above. As always, if the above questions don't include what life is asking from you, spend the month listening to your days to hear it. Or maybe the question or call you need to hear is waiting in one of the quotes listed below. Consider looking there!

Companion Pieces

Recommended Resources for Personal Exploration & Reflection

The following resources are not required reading. We will not analyze these pieces in our group. Instead they are here to companion you on your journey this month, get your thinking started and open you to new ways of thinking about what it means to be part of a people of Attention.

Word Roots

Attention stems from the Latin ad (toward) and tendere (to stretch), meaning “to stretch toward.”

We need to remember that our word tender also comes from tendere. So, the tenderness of our attention comes both from our reaching toward something out of love, and also in the way stretching ourselves towards something changes us and makes us more tender.

Wise Words

This is the first, wildest, and wisest thing I know that the soul exists, and that it is built entirely out of attentiveness.

Mary Oliver

Real attention needs empathy; attention without feeling is just a report.

Mary Oliver

Looking but not seeing is the hearing but not understanding of the eye.

Mokokoma Mokhonoana

At a certain point you say
to the woods, to the sea,
to the mountains, the world,
Now I am ready.

Now I will stop and be wholly attentive.
You empty yourself and wait, listening. . .

Annie Dillard

If we want to support each other’s inner lives, we must remember a simple truth: the human soul does not want to be fixed, it wants simply to be seen and heard.

Parker J. Palmer

To give one’s full attention is to look closely, to linger upon, to delve, to immerse oneself into something that at first seems ‘other’ but soon seems ‘one with.’ To give attention, in the end, is to be grasped.

David Seaburn

There are all different kinds of voices calling you to all different kinds of work, and the problem is to find out which is the voice of God rather than of society, say, or the super-ego, or self-interest. By and large a good rule for finding out is this. The kind of work God usually calls you to is the kind of work (a) that you need most to do and (b) that the world most needs to have done. The place God calls you to is the place where your deep gladness and the world's deep hunger meet.

Frederick Buechner

Your attention is like a combination spotlight and vacuum cleaner: It highlights what it lands on and then sucks it into your brain—for better or worse.

Dr. Rick Hanson

If you take a deep breath and look around, 'Look what's happening to me!' can become 'Look what's happening!' And what's happening? The incredible drama of life is happening. And we're in it!

Sylvia Boorstein

When I take a deep breath and pull in the reins of my “hurry” I begin to find the numinous everywhere. I notice the soft breeze and how it caresses, soothes, and quiets me. I look out the window beyond my desk and I see not just trees, I see how they behold the sun and receive the nurturance offered to them. I speak with someone on the phone and I hear not just a person’s voice, but also the bond of life that connects us.

Joyce Rupp

Whenever you find tears in your eyes, especially unexpected tears, it is well to pay the closest attention. They are not only telling you something about the secret of who you are, but more often than not, God is speaking to you through them of the mystery of where you have come from and is summoning you to where, if your soul is to be saved, you should go next.

Frederick Buechner

I've always thought that you don't love a country by turning a blind eye to its crimes and to a problem. The way that you love a country is by seeing everything that it's done wrong, all of its mistakes, and still thinking that it's beautiful and that it's worthy.

Junot Diaz

There is no more time for pretending that everything can be all right without your care, without your attention.

Abhirami Bhattar male Bhakti poet from Tamil Nadu

Imagine how our lives might be if everyone had even a bit more of the wisdom that comes from seeing clearly. Suppose people everywhere, simultaneously, stopped what they were doing and paid attention for only as long as it took to recognize their shared humanity. Surely the heartbreak of the world's pain, visible to all, would convert everyone to kindness.

What you see you become.

Deepak Chopra

Barbara Brown Taylor recommends that from time to time we take off our clothes, look at ourselves in the mirror, and tell ourselves with as much tenderness as we can, "Here I am...this is my soul's address." To face ourselves naked in the mirror with some measure of gentleness, much less reverence, is a hard assignment... It is deeply spiritual work to put down our self-loathing... It is deeply spiritual work to learn to treat ourselves with compassion; to learn to see ourselves, if only in moments, the same way we look at something or someone we find beautiful: a newborn baby, the ocean, a sunset...

Rev. Elea Kemler

To surrender to too many demands, to commit oneself to too many projects, to want to help everyone in everything is to succumb to violence.

I am the radiant sun among the light-givers:
I am the mind: I am consciousness in the living.

I am death that snatches all;
I, also, am the source of all that shall be born.

I am time without end:
I am the sustainer: my face is everywhere.

I am the beginning, the middle, and the end in

I am the knowledge of things spiritual.

I am glory, prosperity, beautiful speech, memory,

I am the divine seed of all lives.
In this world nothing animate or inanimate exists

I am the strength of the strong;
I am the purity of the good.

I am the knowledge of the knower.

"For the liberal, white progressive or the white moderates as Martin Luther King Jr. referred to them in his "Letter from a Birmingham Jail," the goal has almost never been about achieving the type of racial equity that acknowledges that America's prosperity was bought and paid for with the land, blood, bodies and souls of Black and Indigenous people of color (BIPOC) and that continued oppression and marginalization of both groups has been a mainstay of maintaining the America status quo. Nor has the goal or effort been to really sit with that reality and look at what is truly necessary to right 400-plus years of such immense wrong..."

Restoration in the Attention Economy

Our attention determines the direction toward which we stretch our minds, yet all too often, exercising our attentional power feels less like intentional movement toward some select object of contemplation and more like the passive bracing for an onslaught of sensory input and competing stimuli... It comes as little surprise... when one considers the fact that our attention's capture and commodification fuels a multibillion-dollar industry....
